It is a pitiable thing to see a whole great city the victim of a terrible epidemic that carries off some of its best members to the grave, and fills households with distress and mourning, puts a stop to commerce, causes immense losses, and reduces the working people to destitution and the destitute to dependence upon charity. When such a calamity arises from neglect which the community has been knowingly guilty of, hiving their eyes open to all the consequences, a struggle goes on in the mind of the looker-on between his pity for suffering and his blame of the crimical young man to pull a revolver, but he made no motion. In such a crowd no one knew exactly what was happening, and so the rush of the negro was not stayed. He took two skips and a jump, the razor in his right hand, and as he landed in front of the young man the keen-edged weapon made a sweep for the white throat. Next instant it was flying among the rafters of the building, and the would-be murderer was caressing his elbow and howling with pain. As he elbow and howling with pain. The world was never better for any of them. It is the great delight of a healthy human being to be able to enjoy three square meals a day and a solid night's rest after the day is done. If any-body tells you he does not enjoy his meals of malaria, or a crank. he art of good living, one of our scien-ific writers recently had the pleasure of meeting with two young men who know the value of good things of this life, and who a e fortunate in being able to make the most of them. These gentlemen were found in Levy's trunk store on Main street, nearly opposite the Pesbody Hotel.

Mr. H. S. Levy, on being asked his experience, remarked: "You want to know if I had chills, do you, and if they pulled me down? Well, you bet I was pulled down. I had chills for three years, and I tell you I was miserable. I had that goodfor-nothing feeling of wretchedness which makes a man hate his dinner, and even

I took a little Brown's Iron Bitters, but I didn't take enough at first; but it did me enough there was some. ood to make me believe there was som ning in it; and so I took a lot more. Oh, but didn't it knock my dy-pepsis! It just gave me the best appetite I ever had. I don't care now if I eat them out of house and home; but I do say that Brown's Iron Bitters beats all the doctors, and all the loctor's stuff there is."

And thus it is with the testimony o thousands, who freely tell their experience with this wonderful tonic. They have been brought from a condition in which eating was misery and martyrdom, to one in which dinner is a delight and digestion is no longer dismal duty. It is a grand work to rescue people from the dreadful dumps and doleful distress which dyspep-sia brings upon them. This work is just what Brown's Iron Bitlers is doing. That the public appreciate this good work and enjoy it is evident from the way they are ealing for Brown's Iron Bitters. Experience has proved this medicine to be the great enricher of the blood, the strengthener of the digestive organs and the vitalizer of the whole system. Many people who have suffered severely from sick headaches, nervous diseases and liver disesdaches, nervous diseases and liver disorders, have been materially helped by even a few doses of this valuable remedy. Its merit has for years been tested in all parts of the country, and from Maine to

How Emigration Can Be Prevented by the Government.

New York, August 27.—John Russell Young, ex-Minister to China, in an interview yesterday said: "The emigration from China comes from one point alone—Canton, Canton is a city of 1,000,00 people, the center of a vast province, the most southern open in China.
